Mr. A. Gopala Menon: Yes, Sir. Where extraordinary work is necessary to prepare an answer the official member may be allowed to say that the time and labour involved would be too much.

Mr. T. Krishna Pillai: How can the official member gauge the purpose for which we have asked the question and whether it is commensurate with the possible benefits derivable therefrom. I wish to raise a point of order. Such an answer is not in order.

President: Ever since this Council was established, honourable members will find that similar answers were being given to questions of this character?

Mr. C. V. Chandrasekharan: These answers are not the answers of the department; they are given on behalf of Government?
